Merging Two Depository Libraries into One

by

Sandra M. Calemme¹
University of Detroit Mercy

BACKGROUND

The University of Detroit, founded in 1877, and the Mercy College of Detroit, founded in 1944, consolidated in 1990 to form the University of Detroit Mercy. The University of Detroit Mercy is a private Catholic university, sponsored by the Society of Jesus and Sisters of Mercy, with three libraries designated as part of the Federal depository library program of the Government Printing Office (GPO). The University of Detroit Mercy has four separate locations in Detroit: the McNichols Campus and the Outer Drive Campus, as well as the campuses of the University School of Law and the University School of Dentistry.

The former University of Detroit Library, referred to now as the McNichols Campus Library, has been a depository since 1884. The former Mercy College of Detroit Library, referred to now as the Outer Drive Campus Library, has been a depository since 1965, and the former University of Detroit School of Law Kresge Law Library, referred to now as the Law Library, has been a depository since 1978.

In Fall 1990, the consolidation of the two institutions became a reality, but the formal consolidation of the individual colleges, libraries, and university services had yet to be addressed. For the Libraries, the only significant change was an administrative consolidation. The Outer Drive Library personnel began to report to the Dean of Libraries at the McNichols Campus Library.

PHASE I: RETAINING TWO DEPOSITORY, 1990-1991

Considering the autonomous Law School Library as a separate issue, the Dean of Libraries established, in 1990, the Federal Documents Consolidation Committee to evaluate the two depository libraries. The Committee, which included librarians from both campus libraries, was charged with reviewing and making recommendations regarding the two depository libraries.

The Committee also considered the varying treatment of government documents in the two depositories. A full-time librarian at the Outer Drive Library had spent 20 years cataloging government documents in the LC classification. It was felt that reversing all the years of classifying the documents in that classification was not possible at this time, but the step was recommended for the future. During this phase, the librarian in charge of the government documents at the Outer Drive Library retired.

Although the two depositories were in the same Congressional District, it was thought that the best solution at the time was to retain both depositories, since the impact of the University's consolidation still affected many other library departments. In addition, a cataloger would continue classifying the Outer Drive
